ADVERTISEMENT.

The Reporter was not informed of all the Cases printed in this volume, in which Judges Chilton and Dargan did not sit. There are doubtless others than those noted, in which they were employed as counsel while at the Bar, and consequeatly did not participate.

This volume, like its predecessors, is not free from typographical errors; but as an errata is rarely read by any but the curious, and the professional reader will readily understand that the Judges used apt and significant terms, and make the proper correction for himself, we decline publishing one. By way of apology, however, for the Reporter and compositors, and even Judges, if one be necessary, it may be said that the immense amount of business thrown upon the Court, allows the Judges no time to copy their Opinions, and they are often, so far as the manual labor is concerned, written currente calamo.
